DETAILED ACTION

1. This action is in response to applicant's amendment received on 04/04/05.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

2. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

3. Claims 42-44, 46 and 48 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Quinian (4020724) in view of Katz et al. (3889333).

Quinian discloses the invention substantially as claimed including a cutting die support cylinder 12, a cutting die 11 having a curved shape and curved inner surface, a plurality of holes 14, a fixing means 2. Quinian does not show a bolt having a shank and a head with a larger area than an area of a cross-section of the shank, working means, a spring and a dynamic fluid cylinder. However, Katz et al. teach the use of a bolt 22 having a shank and a head 24 with a larger area than an area of a cross-section of the shank, working means (see Fig. 4), a spring 20a and a dynamic fluid cylinder 34a (pneumatic or hydraulic)(see col. 3, lines 16-18) for the purpose of having a fast exchange of the cutting blade. It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to have modified Quinian's fixing means by providing the bolt having the shank and the head with a larger area than an area of a cross-section of the shank, working means and the dynamic fluid cylinder as taught by Katz et al. in order to obtain a device to fast exchange the cutting die. The combination of Quinian (col. 2, lines 33-36) and Katz et al. (see Fig. 6-7) is capable of performing the intended use of the plurality of cylinders acting independently in said 180 degrees halves.

4. Claims 45 and 47 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Quinian (4020724) in view of Katz et al. (3889333).

Quinian disclose the invention substantially as claimed except for a quincunx form. However, the examiner takes Official Notice that the use of the quincunx form is old and well known in the art for the purpose of firmly holding two pieces. It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to have modified Quinian's fixing means by providing the quincunx form in order to obtain a better holding configuration for the die.

5. Claim 49 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Quinian (4020724) in view of Katz et al. (3889333) as applied to claims 42 and 48 above, and further in view of Harrison et al. (4878407).

The modified device of Quinian discloses the invention substantially as claimed except for a circumferential stop, an axial stop and a centering guide. However, Harrison et al. teaches the use of a circumferential stop 50, an axial stop 68 and a centering guide 70 for the purpose of more accurately locating the die. It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to have modified Quinian's device by providing the circumferential stop, the axial stop and the centering guide as taught by Harrison et al. in order to obtain a device that more accurately locates the die.

Response to Arguments

6. Applicant's arguments with respect to claims have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.
